

Professional Liability

Professional liability claims happen when you are certified to perform a job and someone claims that you have done it wrong. Our firm has defended clients that run the gamut – everyone from doctors to attorneys to accountants to engineers, and more. Our team's diverse background allows us to approach each case to not only address the issue at hand, but to have a keen eye toward preventing any future claims. Our attorneys have innovatively defended matters including substantive legal malpractice claims in which a lawyer failed to file suit within the statute of limitations, to groundless claims brought by former clients who were simply unhappy with the outcome of their litigation.

When it comes to medical malpractice, we have confidently represented healthcare clients involved in ordinary negligence and pharmaceutical drug mis-fill cases.

Whether your case involves a minor incident or a catastrophic injury, we are well-equipped and stand ready to help you clear your name and maintain your reputation by thoroughly investigating the facts.

FormanWatkins has experienced much success in the following types of professional liability cases:
