

FormanWatkins Attorney Leads Engaging Presentation on AI in the Workplace

Malissa Wilson recently delivered a compelling presentation titled AI in the Workplace: Legal Implications and Emerging Trends. The session was presented to the International Association of Defense Counsel's Employment Law and Cybersecurity, Data Privacy, and Technology Committees, and addressed the intersection of AI with workplace practices and data privacy laws.

The presentation analyzed how AI affects talent acquisition and performance management, while also outlining the associated legal and ethical risks. Using Mobley v. Workday as a case study, Malissa provided a comprehensive analysis of key issues such as algorithmic bias, transparency, and compliance with employment and privacy laws. Attendees were left with actionable strategies to harness the benefits of AI while managing its associated risks.

"AI is reshaping workplace operations, but its adoption requires a thorough understanding of legal and ethical considerations," said Wilson. "This presentation provided practical insights to help organizations implement AI responsibly and effectively."
