

Ritchie Elected to Mississippi Law Journal Board of Directors

Spencer Ritchie was elected by the Mississippi Law Journal Board of Directors as a new member of the Board. The Mississippi Law Journal publishes four to six volumes of legal scholarship each year and is operated by students at the University of Mississippi School of Law. First published in 1922, the Mississippi Law Journal is one of the oldest student-edited law reviews in the American South. The Board of Directors, which oversees the Journal's operations, is made up of five Journal alumni, three student editors from the Journal, and one faculty advisor.